Routine mosquito testing by the State of Connecticut has shown that mosquitoes trapped at Lyons Swamp tested positive for West Nile Virus.

This notice is a reminder to take precautions to prevent mosquitoes from biting you.

- The best way to protect against WNV infection is to prevent mosquito bites.
  - Use Environmental Protection Agency (EPA)-registered insect repellent.
  - Wear long, loose-fitting shirts and pants.
  - Avoid being outside between dusk and dawn.
  - Use screens on windows and doors or air conditioning, if available.
  - Use larvicides like mosquito dunks in smaller areas with permanent standing water like ponds.
  - Contact a local mosquito control district or program or licensed professional to treat vegetation near your home or larger areas with permanent standing water.
- No licensed vaccines or medications are available to prevent WNV disease in people.
